

Crisis Planning

Do you care for vulnerable adults who may have an advance statement?
Do you understand your legal responsibilities if a person you support loses capacity?
Might you need to protect yourself from legal action?

For health professionals/care workers

Nottinghamshire

1:30pm to 4:30pm

Facilitated by one or other of the authors of the Advance Statements workbook.

Course price is just £25 and includes your copy of our 110 page workbook

Understand your role and legal responsibilities in regard to advance decisions

An advance statement allows a person to say about the way they want to be treated if they lose capacity. They can make decisions about their care, treatment or support and what will happen to their home. It is a legal document. As a health professional/care worker you will have legal responsibilities when supporting the people who have made advance decisions. We explain in an easy to digest format advance decision making and the legalities.

Who is the course for?

This is for staff of caring organisations. We have welcomed a wide range of NHS professionals and charity workers from all over England and Wales on to our courses.

Outline

- Advance statements and how they can be used
- Types of advance decision making including advance directives
- What are your responsibilities if a client loses capacity
- The Mental Capacity Act and Mental Health Act regarding advance decisions
- Legally what staff can and cannot do when supporting clients
- Nearest relatives and lasting powers of attorney

The content of this course has been checked by solicitors to ensure legal accuracy.

To find out more and to book a place

Email: info@rethinkinghealth.org.uk

Phone: 01163 260444